

The code is written in HTML and CSS and describes an email invitation sent to someone named Kellan who attended Humber College's Virtual Open House information session.

Here's a breakdown of the code:

- HTML: This is the main structure of the email. It defines the content and layout of the email.
- CSS: This code styles the HTML content, including fonts, colors, spacing, and responsiveness for different screen sizes.

The email content consists of:

- Header: This section likely contains a banner image specific to Humber College.
- Content: This is the main body of the email and includes:
  - A personalized greeting to Kellan thanking them for attending the virtual session.
  - Information about upcoming Humber events and initiatives.
  - Links to:
    - Connect with a current Humber student through a Peer to Peer
    - Re-watch the Virtual Open House (link not provided).
- Image: An image named "got-u.png" is included, but its purpose is unclear without seeing the image itself.
- Footer: This section contains Humber College's contact information, address, copyright statement, and links to their Faculty of Liberal Arts & Sciences and Innovative Learning website and email address.

Overall, this code appears to be a well-structured HTML email with CSS styling to format the content for readability across different devices.
